"Aussie" WILLIAM WAUGH 1808-1854 AND FRANCES OXLEY IN AUSTRALIA

"To appreciate the present you have to understand the past"(Author unknown).

William Waugh's ancestors were farmers, who for centuries lived around East Gordon, Berwickshire, in the Lowlands of Scotland. Many legends are told about the Waughs but for the purpose of this brief history I am sticking to facts.

William's grandparents, Thomas & Margaret Johnstone farmed "Caldron Brae" and they had three children, Elizabeth born 17/5 /1740, Thomas 22 /2/1750 and Alexander born 16/8/1754.

Thomas, born 1750, married Isabella Crosbie and they had nine children. Thomas was a very practical, intelligent man and very, very honest and upright and like his parents before him was a devout Presbyterian. He bought "Larretburn" a substantial property in the same area and here he and Isabella proceeded to bring up their family.

Our William Waugh was born on 7 / 2 / 1808. ( I could not put into words how excited I felt when back in 1972 I received his birth certificate from Scotland. That certificate tied us in with the " Waughs " on the large family tree and much accompanying information so kindly circulated by descendants of Alexander D.D.). William was educated at the local parish school. In Scotland at these schools great emphasis was placed on reading so that children could read the scriptures for themselves.

William's father, Thomas, died at "Larretburn" on 8 / 8 / 1820 when William was only twelve years old. According to Thomas' sasine ( will ) William was left a legacy of three hundred pounds which was put in trust for him until he was twenty four years old, so with interest accrued he had a nice sum when he reached that age.

Conditions were hard in Scotland at the time and opportunities seemed to abound in New South Wales for young energetic men like William. Accordingly, William sailed from Leith, Scotland on board " The Drummore " and in October, 1833 arrived at Hobart Town. Many Scottish settlers seemed to stop off there before proceeding to Australia. On the 4th February 1834 he arrived in Sydney on board the "Princess Victoria" and from there he proceeded to the Maitland area where he married Frances Thorpe-Oxley on 30th October, 1837.

Frances was born in Sydney on 19th January 1815 to John Oxley and Charlotte Thorpe. An elder sister, Jeanette, was born on 8th July 1813 and both babies were baptized at St. Phillip's Church, Sydney- Jeanette on 25th July 1813 and Frances on 12th February 1815. John Oxley had arrived on "The Minstrel" on 25th October 1812 to take up duties as Surveyor General. Charlotte Jane Thorpe also arrived on "The Minstrel" but as a convict transported for larceny. She was assigned to John Oxley but there was no formal marriage. In 1818, following her pardon, Charlotte married John Anderson at St. Phillip's Church, Sydney on 28th May and John Oxley appears to have undertaken the upbringing of his two daughters. On 31st October 1821 he married Emma Norton and it is interesting to note that both Charlotte and John Oxley were married to their respective spouses by "Special License"

When Jeanette and Frances were of a suitable age, probably in 1823 (the 1822 census taken in September shows Jeanette was at "Kirkham" with John and Emma Oxley) they were sent to England to John Oxley's family to be educated. They stayed with Lady Molesworth, Oxley's grandmother as Oxley's mother had died when he was twelve. Lady Molesworth looked after some of the Oxley children including Isabella the sister. Imagine how Jeanette and Frances must have felt going across the sea to a great grandmother they had never met! In February 1828 they returned to Australia on board the "Cape Packet" with Isabella Oxley who had married Captain Francis Dixon. Three months after they returned, John Oxley died on 26th May 1828 at the age of forty five years. It is not known whether the girls ever visited "Kirkham" again before his death, but it is known they made their home with Isabella Dixon at Parramatta. (Charlotte Thorpe / Anderson was buried in Sydney on 25th November 1828). Later Isabella had a school for young ladies in Park Street, Sydney so between that and their education in England, Jeanette and Frances were trained in all those things considered necessary for a young lady to take her place in society and to run a home successfully. Isabella was very kind to her brother's two daughters. ( Jeanette Oxley never married. She died on the 12th January 1875 and is buried in the South Head Cemetery, Sydney. Her death certificate named John Oxley as her father but her mother is not named. Sarah Wentworth, widow of William Charles Wentworth supplied particulars of Jeanette's death).

It is not known how William and Frances met . One possible explanation could be that Captain Francis Dixon had land reserved for him not a great distance from where William settled, but Captain Dixon never actually took it up. That interesting story is told by W Allen Wood in Chap. 11 of " Dawn In The Valley ".

Five children were born to William and Frances: Jeanette Anne on 25 / 2 / 1838, Thomas on 25 / 4 / 1841, Isabella Johnston on 17 / 4 / 1844, John Oxley (Waugh) on 29 / 11 / 1847 and Alexander in 1850.

William was a remarkably well built man, nearly six feet tall and he was well known and respected by many in the community. He smoked a pipe. (As a child growing up at "Laretburn" I remember seeing a photo or painting of a very good looking man holding a pipe and his dog was beside him. It must have been William because Henry Waugh from Grafton told me his father, Gilbert Waugh wanted to have his photo taken with his dog because Gilbert's father and grandfather had done so.) William was a tenant farmer on land purchased by John Wighton at Nelsons Plains in 1832. Many other Scottish settlers farmed in the area. William employed his own men and he grew wheat. On 2nd January 1854 he was stabbed by one of the men in his employ and although William lingered for three weeks he died from these wounds on Saturday 21st January 1854 aged 46 years, leaving Frances and her five children aged from five to fifteen years to mourn him. William was buried in the Hinton Cemetery (now called the Hinton Pioneer Cemetery) on the 24th January 1854. Rev. Robert Blain conducted the funeral service. His estate was sworn at seven hundred pounds for Probate purposes, his last will having been signed on 4th January 1854.

I still feel a sense of awe and reverence as I stand beside William's grave in the peaceful tranquillity of that little cemetery and my thoughts go to Frances and her children and indeed to the whole community which would have been shocked by the events leading to William's burial. The spirit of oneness with Frances was demonstrated by the fact "the neighbors voluntarily came in from around and completely finished and secured William's wheat harvest" (Maitland Mercury). Imagine the anguish that was ahead for Frances and her children! She must have had tremendous inner strength to face the future as bravely as she did, remembering that in those days there was no state assistance for widows.

"The Oxleys" offered Frances land at Bowral but her pride would not allow her to accept. She stayed on at Nelsons Plains for several years, most probably until 1870/71. Isabella was married in 1862 from her home and Thomas is mentioned in the Maitland Mercury in 1867 for his help with the Bachelor's Ball in Raymond Terrace where he received a formal acknowledgment in the form of a shield. This shield is now in the possession of I F Waugh, Thomas died in 1913 and his obituary says "he resided in the Tenterfield District for 40 years". It is not known why Frances and some of her family left Nelson's Plains but the decision to do so could be put down to two contributing factors, namely (1) the Free Presbyterian Church was very strong in the New England area and many other Scottish settlers moved to the north and (2) with the passing of the Robertson Land Act in 1861 smaller settlers now had the opportunity of selecting their own land. Prior to settling at "Laretburn" Sunnyside Frances is said to have gone by bullock wagon to the Gunnedah area for a short stay after which she and some of the family proceeded by bullock wagon to the Tenterfield District where they took up land at Sunnyside (undoubtedly chosen for the ample supply of running water) and called it "Laretburn" after the property on which William had grown up on in Scotland. Eventually "Laretburn" comprised approximately 1000 acres made up of Portions 100, 80, 66, 52, 51, 74, 50, 8, 13, 43, 44, 57, 90, and 86 of County Clive Parish of Ballandean. Portions 8, 13, and 44 were taken up in Frances' name.

The spot on which Frances chose to build the house on portion 8 was marvellous with a little gully of clear blue water running by. Here Frances and Thomas set about making it home. A temporary home was erected and in due course a substantial house was built, Willow trees were planted beside the gully, various fruit trees were planted and a cultivation paddock established. There was only one pear tree inside the house yard and that was planted by Frances as was the oak tree across the gully as a reminder of the oak trees her father had planted at "Kirkham".

"Laretburn" didn't derive much income but it derived much happiness and its hospitality was known to many. As Frances was the Matriarch, it was only natural that it was to "Laretburn" that the family returned. It is known that Alexander Waugh brought his daughter Mary to stay with Frances in the late 1880's.

Frances continued to live with Thomas and his wife Emily, my grandparents, and their children and she died from Influenza on 21st November 1891 undoubtedly in the presence of many of her family as was the custom for the Waughs. She is buried in the family grave in the Presbyterian section of the Tenterfield cemetery. Words in the family Bible describe her "as a much loved grandmother". Despite an intensive search and many enquiries no copy of a paper containing an obituary for Frances could be found.

My father was 10 years old when Frances died so had many memories of her and in retrospect I wish I had listened more carefully when he talked about her. My heart goes out to Frances for all the sadness and hardships she endured but she was blessed with a loving family of her own and I for one am privileged to be her great granddaughter.

Today is 24th January 1996, 142 years since William was buried. As I was about to write this brief history of William and Frances Waugh I came across the following quote by Rev. John Graham part of which I quote : "Be proud of those who came in sailing ships and those who followed". William and Frances, we your descendants are indeed proud of you and we salute your memory!

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

To all, who over the years have contributed with a sentence here and there but most particularly I acknowledge the efforts of my brother Dr I F Waugh who contacted the Scots Ancestry in Edinburgh who supplied valuable information and photos - for his obtaining the microfilm files of the Maitland Mercury dated 28 January 1854 and copying them in December 1971 - for locating and filming the headstone on William Waugh's grave in the Hinton

Cemetery also in 1971 and for being so generous with having negatives taken of so many photos, making it possible for me to pass on so much information to so many on all "the lines". Also Sandra Waugh for obtaining certificates re Charlotte Jane Thorpe. Nancy Fox, Joan Lamb, Grace Richards, Henry Waugh and Marie Melski for birth dates and certificates etc and the late Lucy Frances Harvey Rees who introduced me to the massive family tree.

I felt it necessary to interrupt 'the flow' of this writing in par. 3 on page 1 to acknowledge the wealth of information supplied by descendants of Alexander DD making it so easy for us to 'set the scene' in Australia. Also I thank Rosemary Waugh-Alcock for transcribing the wording on the Waugh grave in East Gordon and for allowing me to read her copy of the "Memoir of Waugh - The Reverend Alexander Waugh, DD by Rev. James Hay AM and Rev Henry Belfrage DD published in 1830 - 2nd edition - and Reeve Waugh for sharing his records.

The John Oxley Story

From notes by Nancy Fox.

John Oxley, snr was a farmer at Westow, Yorkshire. His wife, Isobel, was a daughter of the fourth Viscount Molesworth, of Kirkham Abbey, Yorkshire, and Lady Molesworth (nee Lever). They had seven children, namely:

1. John Joseph William Molesworth Oxley 1783 - 1828, joined the Navy - later was Surveyor-General of NSW from 1812. Born Kirkham Abbey, Westow, Yorkshire.
2. Lieutenant Richard Oxley - joined the Navy - compelled to resign due to misconduct, rejoined later - died at sea in 1818.
3. Henry Oxley (unmarried) educated Canterbury. Ordained Roman Catholic Priest (much to the disgust of his brother, John.) Later returned to Church of England.
4. Thomas Oxley joined the Navy - deserted - rejoined- then lost at sea in 1819.
5. George Oxley}
6. Thomas Oxley} Died in infancy, buried with Mother at Westow.
7. Isabel Margaret Oxley b? - 1839 (died Maitland) married in 1823 to Capt. Frances Dixon b? - 1832. Daughters: 1. Elizabeth Margaret Dixon 1824 - ? Married Reverend T Wells. 2. Frances ? Dixon 1826 - ? Married Reverend James S. Hassell.

John Oxley married Emma Norton in 1821. They had two sons - 1. John (1824) and 2. Henry (1826) who engaged in farming at Kirkham near Camden, NSW.

Previously, John Oxley had one daughter to Elizabeth Marnon in 1818, and two daughters to Charlotte Thorpe - 1. Jeanette Oxley 1813 - 1875, born in Sydney and lived at Woolahra, where she died. She did not marry. 2. Frances Oxley 1815 - 1891, born in Sydney and buried in Tenterfield. Both these girls were baptised in St Phillip's Church, Sydney.

The Convict Story

Charlotte Thorpe 1794? - 1828 was a convict. She was held at Middlesex Gaol Delivery and sentenced on 19.2.1812 for seven years. She was transported on the ship "Minstrel" to Australia. She received pardon on 15.5.1818. She then married John Anderson (by special licence on 27.5.1818. She died in Sydney on 25.11.1828. Her death certificate states she was 31 years, but I think she would have been 34 years. Her marriage certificate states she was 24 years in 1818 when she married John Anderson.

The Oxley Daughters

Jeanette and Frances Oxley were taken to England by John Oxley's sister, Isabel and were cared for by Lady Molesworth. They returned to Australia with Isabel (Dixon) on the "Cape Packet" on 24.2.1828. (I wonder did they see their father before he died). They lived with Isabel at Parramatta and assisted her at her school for young ladies in Park Street, Sydney. They were respected as genteel ladies.

The Waugh Story

Frances Oxley married William Waugh 1808-1854 and lived at Nelson's Plains on the Hunter River, NSW. They had five children, namely: 1. Jeanette Anne 1838-1921. 2. Thomas 1841-1913. 3. Isabel Johnston (a Christian name) 1844-1927. 4. John Oxley 1847-1926. 5. Alexander William 1850-1907.

William was murdered by workers on his farm, when he tried to break up a drunken brawl at Christmas time.

Frances raised her family at Nelson's Plains. It is believed they moved somewhere in the vicinity of New England or adjacent slopes before coming to Tenterfield about 1870. They lived at "Six Mile", as Sunnyside was then called - near Tenterfield.

1. Jeanette Anne Waugh did not marry, she inherited her wealth - she spent much of her time on vacations, but died in Tenterfield, in 1921.

3. Isabel Johnston Waugh married Thomas Danvers Johnston. They had eight children and lived on their farm on the Manning River and later on the Macleay River. They were buried at Dorrigo. Their marriage took place before Frances and the other four children arrived in Tenterfield.

4. John Oxley Waugh married Elizabeth "Isabella" Muir at the Presbyterian Church in Inverell on 13.2.1873. (I still have their original marriage certificate.) Their farm was "Six Mile", Sunnyside, but when a wheat crop failed, he accepted droving and later was employed on Tenterfield Station as head stockman and overseer "of few equals". He was a foundation member of the Presbyterian Church committee. He seconded a motion to build the first Presbyterian Church in Tenterfield - still in use today. In 1907, John Oxley Waugh moved to Mt Mackenzie. They had eight children, namely:

Descendants of Surveyor-General John Oxley 1783-1828 - Obituaries

Gilbert Oxley Waugh. 1883-1937.

The death occurred at the Gympie General Hospital on Saturday, September 25th, of Gilbert Oxley Waugh, eldest son of the late John Oxley Waugh and wife Elizabeth, (Isabella) of Tenterfield, NSW. Deceased, who was 54 years of age, was born at Tenterfield and during the past six years was engaged in farming at Gootchie. He served in the Great War in the First Light Horse, members of the local Returned Soldiers' League being present at the funeral. He is survived by his wife and three children, Henry, Grace and Mary. The funeral was largely attended, services being held both at the funeral parlour and at the graveside by Rev.J.Beatty.

John Bernard Oxley Waugh. 1890-1956.

Mr John Bernard Oxley Waugh, of "Rockwell" station, Daymar (southwest Line) who died at Surfers' Paradise this month, was a direct descendant of the explorer John Oxley. His Grandmother was formerly Frances Oxley, who was a daughter of John Oxley. Mr Waugh was born at Tenterfield (NSW) 64 years ago. Thirty years ago he took up land in the Mungindi district, and as it had always been his wish to be buried there, a special plane was chartered to enable his funeral to take place there. Roads were impassable, due to heavy floods. A four-wheel drive vehicle was used to convey the coffin to the cemetery.

John Oxley Waugh. 1847-1926.

Mr John Oxley Waugh who died yesterday at the ripe age of 78 years, was one of the fine group of stalwarts whom the late Mr W.H.Walker found on the payroll of Tenterfield station, brought from Glenlyon, when he took it over from Messrs Simpson and Readett some 47 years ago, quite a number of whom are yet alive, men of the pioneering type for whom no task was too stiff and no day too long. Mr Waugh was born at or about Raymond Terrace, and was a grandson of the famous surveyor and explorer, Sir John Oxley, whose discovery of the Brisbane River was commemorated by its first centenary a couple of years ago. He was never at fault among stock, his word was his bond, and in all relations of life he was "as straight as they are made." Mr Waugh lived for many years at "Six Mile", Sunnyside, from where he looked after the northern portion of the station cattle-run, the late Mr George Kermode being for ten years or so the overseer over that department, and Mr Waugh's two brothers. Stockmen being Messrs Philip Hurtz and Willie Morgan. After the station subdivision Mr Waugh settled on a Property at Mt Mackenzie, and as time went on was gradually less and less seen about the township. He fought a good rearguard action against failing strength, and complained but little. The deceased was ill for about seven weeks and bore his sufferings very patiently. There are three sons and four daughters who survive. The sons are Messrs. John (Daymar, Q), Gilbert (Bluff Rock) and Gordon (Mt Mackenzie). The daughters are Mesdames Duncan (Kelly's Gully), Hooper (Brisbane), Murphy (Roma) and Williams (Woodside). His wife, and a daughter, Mary Dunn (Sydney), predeceased him.

The remains were laid to rest this afternoon in the Presbyterian Cemetery, Tenterfield, the Rev. W.F.Paul officiating at the graveside.

Descendants of John Oxley

Sir:- In your issue of August 24 there appeared a letter stating that the only descendants of Lt. John Oxley, explorer and Surveyor-General of NSW from 1812, were the sons born of the marriage to Miss Emma Norton in 1821. Actually this was John Oxley's second marriage, and according to the dates given took place only seven years before his death. This marriage was by "special licence".

Two daughters were born of John Oxley's first marriage (colonial) to Charlotte Thorpe, who was a convict! They were Jeanette (Jennet) and Frances. Jeanette did not marry, and Frances married William Waugh.

Years later Oxley married Emma Norton, and on his death his property known as "Kirkham" passed to his widow and later to his sons.

The daughters were sent to England in the care of Lady Molesworth, (Oxley's Grandmother) but they returned before his death in 1828. Jeanette lived in Sydney, and Frances and husband William Waugh lived on the Hunter around Nelson's Plains and Raymond Terrace for many years. It was here that William was murdered by a worker on his property. They had five children, namely: Jeanette Anne, Thomas, Isabel, John Oxley and Alexander William. They remained on the property for some years, and eventually came to Tenterfield, where John Oxley Waugh established his home at "Six Mile", near Sunnyside and later at Mt Mackenzie, near Tenterfield, which still remains in the family. Thomas settled at "Lareburn", at Sunnyside. Of the daughters, Jeanette did not marry, Isabel married Thomas Johnston, and lived first on the Manning and later on the Macleay River. Alexander married Eliza Dargue and lived in Grafton. There were eight children in the Johnston family, of whom the youngest, Jeanette, is my mother.

There is a closer relative of John Oxley than I am, living in Brisbane at present. Mrs M.B. Hooper, of Dornoch Terrace, is a daughter of John Oxley Waugh, of Tenterfield, and a cousin of my mother. Mrs Hooper, being one generation older than I am, has many personal recollections of her grandmother, Frances Oxley Waugh, daughter of Lt. John Oxley and his first wife.

Charlotte Thorpe was transported from England on "The Minstrel" ship in 1812, was paroled in 1818 after a seven year sentence. She then married John Anderson (by "special licence").

THE 'BANJO' PATERSON - WALTZING MATILDA STORY.

It would be of interest to know exactly how the name 'MATILDA' came into the song. 'Banjo' Paterson used to visit my Grandparents at Boonoo Boonoo, near Tenterfield, as he had a great interest in horses, he used to go hunting for dingoes with my Grandfather, Philip Hertz and his staghounds. I have an extract from a story on 'Banjo' Paterson, Philip Hertz and BOONOO BOONOO written by Tenterfield historian Norman Crawford, consisting of several pages, which is housed in the archives in the University in Armidale. Philip Hertz and his staghounds were known near and far - for hunting dingoes which were prevalent in the district. He secured 42 scalps in one winter!

At the time my Mother was a child learning to play the piano. Her name was MATILDA. 'Banjo' was particularly interested in this little girl playing her favourite waltzes, which was the popular music of the day. Sometimes 'Banjo' would nurse her at the piano while she played her music. He told Matilda and her parents that he would compose a song with her name in it - he was so intrigued with this talented little girl - and this he surely did!! It was a lifetime satisfaction for the Hertz family, knowing that 'Banjo' Paterson had honoured his promise. He was their house-guest when he came to Tenterfield.

In her nineties Matilda still played the piano with agility, and had vivid memories of 'Banjo'; a long time friend of her family at Boonoo Boonoo, which was a part of Tenterfield Station. My Grandfather worked on this part of the Station, maybe this is how they became acquainted, and a long friendship ensued.

Matilda retained all her faculties until her demise at 99 years - just a few short months of reaching 100!!!

'Banjo' Paterson was friends with the Walker family of Tenterfield Station. Later he married ALICE WALKER in the Presbyterian Church in Tenterfield on 8th. April, 1903.

Matilda married Gordon Lindsay Waugh (great-grandson of John Oxley who was surveyor-general of N.S.W. from 1812.)

John was 27, and it appears his parents were dead.

H.M.S. Porpoise
Woolwich
Nov, 15th 1810.

My Dear "Henry",

I received and read your letter this morning with every attention it was my power to bestow on so important a subject.

The very commencement informs me of the change of your religion, a subject of all others most solemn.

I am not one of those who believe no one can be saved beyond the pale of their own faith, far from it, mine is the religion of natural and of reason.

Never would I attempt to express my opinion on a subject which concerns the individual alone. I most sincerely trust this Conversion has not been hurried, and that nothing but the fullest of convictions could have induced you to change the faith you were brought up in. Of that you must be the best judge, tho' I cannot but observe that in the whole of my experience (and an enlarged one in has been) I never knew any good result from unsettled principles. With respect to your temporal prospects you have chosen for yourself and may they prove prosperous. It rejoices me to hear you are well and happy. You are indebted for everything to your venerable grandmother to her therefore is due your most affectionate duty, I should be most happy to have it in my power to soothe her declining years, and should opportunity occur, I will not fail to embrace it by visiting both.

*How distressing to my pride and feelings has been my return to my native land. One brother an alien to his country and his name (which was Thomas). Another by his imprudence liable to punishment from the offended laws of his country, with nothing but yourself to plead his excuse and a third ever dear to me and now not less dear, professing a different faith. A sister then is all that is left of the once happy family who surrounded the Kirkham fireside. *She alone remains steadfast in the paths of rectitude, though surrounded by temptations and unprotected even by her nearest relatives. Pardon me, Henry you know not the pride, nay even the haughtiness of my nature and how ill it stoops to disgrace even its connections. I feel this degradation as my own, and I almost blush when my family name is mentioned. Forgive me Henry my feelings are warm, and the present temper of my mind unsettled by the disunion that appears to exist in our family.*

Poor Richard, strong passions and ill regulated desire have, I fear undone him. You say he is married, the situation in life he has chosen for himself precludes almost the idea of the connection proving either beneficial or honourable; if it has proved either, why fear to make her name and situation known. With his talents and abilities (for I know he possesses them) he might have looked forward to the highest rank in Naval Service, instead of being obliged to change his name and conceal his residence, circumstances in themselves sufficient to wound a feeling mind. If he possesses the spirit and ambition he once possessed he would long ere this have commanded a ship, for I am confident that in all situations ability and zeal are rewarded.

Forgive me Henry, my feelings are warm and the present temper of my mind unsettled by the discontent that appears to exist in our family. For my own part, I entered the Naval Service much against my inclinations and in fact to the injury of my health. Time and reason have *destroyed my proposition against it, and whilst my King and Country want my service they shall command them and it is my dearest hope that I may not perish undistinguished in the crowd. Should fortune prevent me from ranking in the list of men, I trust it shall never prevent me from enjoying the more enviable satisfaction of a self-approving mind. I cannot but sympathise in the loss **Mr. & Mrs. Lever have sustained. It cannot however but be an enviable source of comfort to reflect that their son fell at his post, in the zealous fulfilment of his duty, and in the defence of his King, his country, and his religion. I shall take the earliest opportunity of writing to them. In the meantime assure them of my sincere sorrow for the loss they have sustained, and I trust peace and happiness will not long be absent from their hearts.*

I ardently wish to see my cousins for I feel as an isolated being without family or connections, long separated as I have been from my fraternal ones. I few months (probably weeks) will determine whether I shall leave England forever or for only a few years. My concerns require my presence....end of letter.

July 18, 1811.

Sir,

Having learnt that Mr. Grimes has this day resigned the situation of Surveyor General of Lands in New South Wales in consequence of ill health, I am encouraged to hope you will not deem my present application to you to succeed him as act of presumptions.

Should I be so fortunate as to engage your favour, Sir, my very best endeavors will be exerted to merit such a distinction and, the gratitude such kindness must inspire will end only with my life.

*I am etc etc
John Oxley.*

January 1, 1812.

At the age of 29 years he was appointed Surveyor General at £273.15.0. After settling his family affairs, he sailed on the "Buffalo" and arrived in Sydney on October 25th of the same year.

On October 31st, 1821 Oxley was married by special licence at St. Phillip's Church Sydney, by Rev. William Cowper, to Emma, the youngest surviving daughter of John Norton of Fairlight Place, Mulgoa, NSW. She was an educated English gentle woman of high practical ability and managed her husbands estates with success during his frequent journeys of survey and exploration.

* She was Isabelle Margaret, who married Captain Dixon and died in Sydney in 1839. She left two daughters, both of whom married clergymen. Elizabeth Margaret being wedded to Rev. Twells, whilst Frances married Rev. James Hassall.

A river found

LIEUTENANT JOHN OXLEY RN 1785-1828

Lieutenant John Joseph William Molesworth Oxley was born at Kirkham Abbey, near Westow, Yorkshire in 1785, and died aged 43 on May 26, 1828 at his country estate "Kirkham", near Camden in New South Wales.

Aged 15, Oxley joined the Royal Navy as a midshipman aboard HMS "Venerable". In November 1801 he was transferred to the HMS "Buffalo" as master's mate and sailed to Australia. He arrived in Port Jackson in October 1802 and soon became involved in coastal survey work. In 1805 Governor King appointed him acting-lieutenant in command of the "Buffalo". He returned to England in 1807 where, on November 25, he was confirmed in the rank of lieutenant. A year later, he returned to Sydney having been appointed first lieutenant in HMS "Porpoise".

When the deposed Governor Bligh was allowed to leave Sydney in March 1809, Oxley accompanied the voyage back to England. He sought various appointments and was successful in his application for a land grant in the colony of New South Wales.

In 1811, Oxley's application for the position of Surveyor-General was successful, so he retired from the Navy and, in May 1812, sailed in the "Minstrel" to take up his new duties in Sydney. He engaged in many inland expeditions and, in 1818, discovered the Hastings River. Between September and December of 1819, he was engaged in surveying and charting Jervis Bay

In 1823, Governor Brisbane instructed Oxley to examine Moreton Bay, Port Curtis and Port Bowen for possible convict settlement sites; accordingly, on October 23, he departed Sydney in the colonial cutter "Mermaid".

Upon arrival at Cape Byron late in the afternoon of October 30, he sailed wide to avoid the reefs off Point Danger and spent the night tacking off North Stradbroke.

Next day, his log describes the scene:

"At noon, Light winds and Sultry Winds South. The coast to Point Lookout, low Barren and Sandy. Numerous fires indicating it to be inhabited. Mount Warning W 71 S, Point Lookout W 59 N. A current has set to the Southward W 40' in 18 hours. At 1/2 past 4 Point Lookout W 82 1/2 N and Mount Warning W 88 S. Distance off shore 1/2 mile. The wind at N N E. Tacked off shore, the coastline extremely low and sandy.

"The low hills of Barren sand, with a few Shrubs and Stunted Trees rise at the distance of about 1/2 a mile from the Beach, between the Beach and this low range appears a Shoal Lagoon, and at the back of the Beach to the W S W there appears an extensive sheet of water most probably communicating with the head of Moreton Bay" (this supposition proved to be correct).

"On laying the above bearings on the map, I found it impossible to reconcile them, the coastline seems low down about 3 miles too far to the West according to the Bearing of Point Lookout, and repeating the view. During the night Fresh Winds from N N E with a heavy confused sea. Standing off and on the land."

"FRIDAY October 31, Strong Breezes from N N E. Stood in for the land, a Strong Southerly current during the night drifted us conveniently to the South. At noon, finding the fall increasing, I determined to run along the shore to the Southward in the hopes of finding shelter under some of the Points projecting from the coast. At 1 Hour up along shore running down within half a mile, at 2 o'clock saw a considerable opening in the Beach, hove to and out boat, sent the Muster to Sound as there appeared a fair channel. (Moreton Bay's south passage: today's Seaway). At 3 o'clock the boat returned having entered the inlet at low water, finding only six feet on the bar, the tide indicated a rise of 6 or 8 feet. Observed from the mast head the sheet of water communicating with this opening to extend to the Northward 4 or 5 miles at the back of the beach, and to the S W it extended 3 or 4 miles in various shoal areas to the base of a low Range of Hills which terminate the Main Range of which Mount Warning is the summit to the N W (the brackwater). The shoal water was seen 5 or 6 miles and there being no land or Hills in that direction, I have no doubt but that this lagoon is merely a continuation of the shoal over at the Head of Moreton Bay which was several miles to the South of Point Lookout, thus making the land of Point Lookout an Island. (Oxley proved this about a month later) At 3 made sail intending to anchor to the South of Point Danger.

"At 5 passed close to a Bold Headland* about 3 miles North of Point Danger on the south side of this headland we had the satisfaction to discover a considerable river with an apparent clear entrance."

[*Point Danger: Oxley remains the only navigator to misperceive Cook's Point Danger - he approached from the opposite direction.]

[*the Tweed River].

"Stood on for the purpose of anchoring between the Island and the Mainland, Point Danger, At

1/2 past 5 keeping too close to the Island we shoaled our water to 2 1/2 fathoms, but almost instantly deepened to 5 fathoms. Anchored under the lee of the Island in 7 fathoms sandy bottom, being tolerably sheltered from the S S E round by the W to N E. The distance between the Island and the Main is about 50 chains, the point of the Main as well as the Island composed of regular Basaltic Pillars. To the South extends a Sandy Beach of about 3 1/2 miles ending in a low Sandy Point off which Breakers seem to extend about 3/4 of a mile. Sounded between the Island and the Main and found the deepest water 6 fathoms in mid channel rather inclining to the Main land, observed the River from the Masthead take a S W direction running through a moderately elevated country towards the Base of Mount Warning. During the Night strong Breezes from the Northward, a considerable swell but no sea.

At Daylight sent Mr Penson to examine the entrance of the River. At 8 o'clock he returned having found a good and safe channel having 2 fathoms at low water and no break, although it was blowing strong from the N N E. This news determined me to remain and take the first opportunity of entering the River with the vessel, and examine both the River and the country in the vicinity

'The country appears good'

THE RELEVANT PART OF OXLEY'S REPORT TO GOVERNOR BRISBANE PERTAINING TO HIS TWEED, GOLD COAST AND MORETON BAY DISCOVERIES.

"We had little opportunity of making any nautical additions to the Charts of Captain Flinders.

We however discovered that the land of Point Lookout is an Island, and that Moreton Bay extends as far South as lat. 28 S., where it communicates with the Sea by a Shoal Channel through a Sandy beach navigable for Boats.

We also had the Satisfaction to ascertain that the waters having their Source in the high lands of Mt Warning, formed a considerable Stream, the entrance into which is close to Point Danger. Across which there is a Bar having 12 feet on it at half tide, there may be probably 14 feet at high water.

I had not time to proceed up this River beyond a few miles, sufficiently far, however, to perceive that the River had its source to the Westward of Mt Warning.

The Country on the Banks appeared to be good and abounded with useful timber. I consider the Knowledge of this River useful in establishing the point that the Brisbane River does not receive its waters from the lofty ranges of the Sea coast, and as the course of that River had already been traced beyond the N.W. extreme of the Coast ranges, it appeared still more probable that it derived its supply from some part of the S.W. Interior."

LIEUTENANT John Oxley, arrived off the Cape Byron aboard the cutter "Mermaid" on October 30, 1823. He was on a mission for Governor Brisbane to examine Moreton Bay, Port Curtis and Port Bowen for possible convict settlement sites.

On Friday, October 31, he anchored off the entrance to the Tweed River and next morning sent a boat to examine the entrance. The crew reported a "good and safe channel".

Part II

JOHN OXLEY EXPLORER

175 years ago John Oxley discovered the Tweed River. This is the second half of an article prepared by local historian Bill Stafford. Part I was published on Wednesday.

BELOW: The colonial cutter "Mermaid" in which John Oxley sailed along the Tweed and Gold Coasts in 1823

"THIS news determined me to remain and take the first opportunity of entering the River with the vessel, and examine both the River and the country in the vicinity, which seemed to me an object of the first importance when the description of country at the head of Moreton Bay is considered, and further, that the navigation of that Bay is of the most difficult description even for small vessels, and that for large ships there does not appear any shelter whatever.

"The various persons who had visited it had found no fresh water, and it's southern extremity a distance of full 50 miles from Cape Moreton, was now known to be nothing more than an extensive series of shoal lagoons, separated from the seaward by Ridges of barren sandy land.

"After breakfast I despatched the large whale Boat with the Mate to the River with directions to sound the channel wile (sic) at high water, and afterwards to proceed up the River opposite the vessel and then communicate with us from the Beach.

"Landed on the Island for the purpose of taking bearings of the different headlands and remarkable points in the interior. The Island was literally (sic) alive with Birds, Pelicans, Red Bills, Sooty Peterell (sic) cum Multis alis. At every step we were up to our knees in the holes they had burrowed.

"The Island was composed entirely of Basalt, it is above 160 feet high in the highest part, and covered with large loose masses of the same flour (sic) as it's patlo Base, there was abundance of (Sampshire?) with two species of Creepers bearing Bell shaped flowers of a light Blue colour.

"On the West end of the island we found the remains of the wreck of a vessel which must have been there many years, the bolts in the timber were entirely decayed, the part we found seemed to be the framing of the after part of her upper deck, the timbers, planking and covering piece were of oak, and she had been made trenailed. The wood work, as well as iron was in the last stages of decay and might have formed part of a vessel of 2 or 300 Tons some 20 years or more ago. [this remains a mystery: there is no sign of it now.]

"FROM it's summit the following Bearings were taken, Mount Warning N 231 1/2 Sandy Point Southerly N 169 Reef off ditto Extreme N 162 1/2 Point to the North forming entrance to the River N 312 3/4 Another Point North Rocky Headland N 304 North extreme of land in sight being centre of the sandy beach passed yesterday N 322. Point Danger at 232 1/2.

I did not observe any Reefs or Broken Water off this Island to the East or seen the situation assigned to sound shoals in Flinders chart.

"At noon observed the O M A 18 feet above the sea on the West end of the Island 75440. During the time I was employed taking bearings, Mr Umacke turned no less than 13 fine Green Turtles on the Rocks off the East end of the Island, each weighting at least 3 cwt, we sent 7 of them on board and allowed the others to make their escape. Besides the Turtles the boat had been successful in fishing having caught several fine Snappers. At noon it blew a Land Gale from the North with much sea. Observed the crew of the boat who entered the River returning along the Beach scrub opposite the vessel. Named the Island which had been so favourable to our Fishery Turtle Island. ("Cook's Isl'd by" has been struck out.)

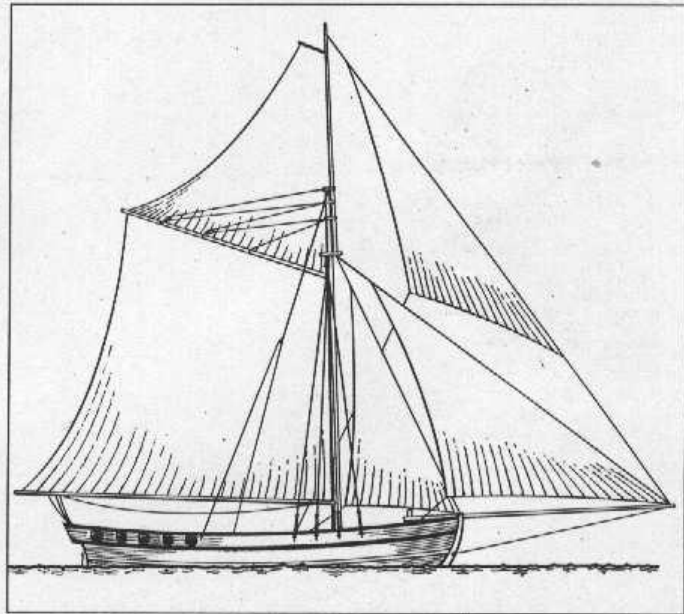

"LANDED on the Beach opposite the vessel, the lower part of the Inlet encumbered with sand shoals with numerous low swampy islets extending for 6 or 7 miles no passage between them for boats.

The Main River bended towards Mt Warning, went up it for about 4 miles, and left off at a Magnificent reach, whence we had a fine view of Mt Warning round the Base of which the River seemed to flow.

"After quitting the sand shoals at the entrance, the River deepened to 3 or 4 fathoms muddy bottom, Brackish 1/2 mile wide. The bed of the River below the level of the sea except at high water, causing the portion of it near the E to be shallower (?) (?) than that part which flows immediately from the higher land. Tide rises inside 2 or 3 feet, outside and along the Coast 9 or 10. Ebb tide Flows from the North set after tide influenced by the Winds.

"Saw several females of Natives. Spoke to one of them, a miserable looking race, the children deformed and Rickety, Polibelled, not afraid of Europeans.

"Returned to that part of the Inlet opposite the vessel, left the Boat under a strong guard for the night and returned on board intending to renew the examination of the River in the morning. Wind blowing strong from the N N E during the night, frequent heavy showers.

"SUNDAY November 2 Fresh winds from the N N E until 8 o'clock when it suddenly changed to the South and began to blow very hard. "Sent word to the party on shore to return with their Boat on board and pass through the channel of entrance. At 11 the Boat returned on board, having come out of the River without difficulty though it was blowing very hard.

"Observed the Natives collecting along the Shore in great numbers, they assembled opposite the vessel on Pt Danger all armed.

"Weighed and made Sail, the Natives setting up a universal shout on seeing the Sails hoisted. Passed between the Island and the Main, and found only 2 fathom-sand in one place less.

"Between the Island and the point the Depth of Water seems very irregular, and is by no means a safe or good Channel for any vessel above the class of the Mermaid.

"The Breakers or Swell indicate shoal water, the sea weed on the rocks being precisely the colour of the water.

"Should circumstances permit our return to this place to complete the examination of the River, I shall keep to the Eastward of the Island."

"The Channel into this Inlet is better than into Port Macquarie.

"No freshwater observed or so far as I went in the boat. Natives probably supplied from Swamps which appear to be in the centre of all the Islets, and at the back of the low shore of the Main land.

"Many Pine Trees on the branches of the River, otherwise well covered with wood, among which was the Cedar and others common to Port Macquarie. Pandanus (grulus leiso?) Point Danger exactly resembles it's Basaltic Columns the Giants Causeway in Ireland on a smaller scale.

"The summits of the higher ridges of Mountains N W of Mt Warning as well as that Mountain itself appear columnar, the stony points in the River all Basalt.

EXTRA

175 years ago Lieutenant John Oxley discovered the Tweed River. To mark the occasion the Daily News has been publishing a series of articles on Oxley and his voyage.

The following article is transcribed from "The Discovery and Exploration of Moreton Bay and the Brisbane River" by George Mackness O.B.E., M.A., Litt.D. (Melb), D.Litt. (Syd), F.R.A.H.S.

It provides a colourful description of the Mermaid's visit to the Tweed by journalist John Uniacke, a member of Oxley's party which, apart from the ship's master Charles Penson and crew, also included Lieutenant Robert Stirling of the Buffs regiment, architect John Huddle and an Aboriginal named "Bowen".

THE wind being fair we immediately got under way from Port Macquarie, and continued our course to the northward till Friday afternoon, when it shifted, and came on to blow so hard, that we determined to run in shore and look for anchorage; this we found under the lee of a small island off Point Danger (so named by Captain Cook), about a mile from the land.

While running down for this place, we perceived the mouth of a large river about a mile and a half to the northward; and the next morning at daylight the master was dispatched in the whale-boat to ascertain the possibility of taking the vessel into it.

Shortly afterwards, Mr Stirling and I landed on the island with our guns.

The rocks which formed the base was evidently of volcanic origin. It was of a dark colour, full of small holes and extremely hard, while on the western side were many regular circular cavities, some of which were about four or five yards in diameter at the top, and tapered down gradually towards the bottom, which was usually fitted with round stones.

One of these holes, in particular, had a communication underneath with the sea, and at every returning surf, threw up considerable quantities of water with a loud noise.

The super-incumbent rocks were basaltic, and those of a small rock to the N.W. of the island, as well as those of the bluff headland, immediately opposite on the main, were inferior only in extent to the Giant's Causeway in the North of Ireland.

In ascending to the top of the island, we sank nearly knee-deep at every step in the bird-holes that underlain the surface. The inhabitants of these subterranean dwellings were sooty Petrels, mutton-birds and red-bills, the last very good eating.

We shot many of them, as the young ones were fully fledged and got up in numbers around us, when disturbed by our falling into their holes.

On top of the island we were surprised to see some hundred pelicans seated quietly near their young, who with the eggs, covered a considerable space. They did not appear at all intimidated, although, they must have heard the reports of our guns several times.

However, on giving them a volley, which they did not seem to care more for than if it came from pop-guns, they slowly took flight, screaming frightfully. These birds were at least five feet high, and from the peculiar formation of the bill, the effect of such a multitude drawn up as if in regular order, was very singular.

Having taken a few of the young ones and eggs, we were proceeding to the place where we landed, when we observed what appeared to be part of a wreck on the N.W. point of the island.

We immediately proceeded towards it, not without expressing the hope that it might prove the vessel of that unfortunate and universally lamented navigator, La Perouse, who is generally supposed to have perished some where in these latitudes, having never been heard of since he left Port Jackson in the year 1788.

It appeared the larboard quarter, with part of the stern and quarter deck of a vessel of at least three hundred tons. The plank which was oak, was not yet totally destroyed.

Though we formed a variety of ingenious conjectures on the subject, we could find nothing about the wreck by which we could determine what she had been.

"We then returned on board, where we found that the master had arrived before us; he reported that he had examined the entrance and found two fathoms on the bar at low water; with deep and secure anchorage further in.

As the river appeared to run from the southward, and parallel to the shore for some distance, it was agreed that the mate should go after breakfast with a boat into the river, until opposite where the vessel lay, when we were to join him by land and proceed to the examination of the upper part of the river.

In the meantime Mr Oxley and I again landed on the island, to take an observation and examine the wreck more closely; but nothing further was discovered by which we could in any way identify her.

We, however, picked up a piece of slate with part of a name deeply scratched on it, and also part of a case of mathematical instruments.

Mr Oxley ascended the hill, while I walked towards the S.E. end of the island, accompanied by a native black of the name of Bowen, whom we had brought from Sydney.

After spending some time in sauntering about, during which I found a quantity of fine sponge, and a large patch of excellent rock spinach, of which I took a great bundle aboard, on approaching a small reef at the S.E. end of the island, I observed, to my great satisfaction, upward of a dozen turtles, lying asleep on a small beach. I instantly dispatched Bowen for assistance, and, on Mr Penson, the master's coming up, we were fortunate enough to secure seven, some of which were very large, two of them weighing about four cwt.

The largest was so very unwieldy that we were obliged to cut its throat on the spot, otherwise we should not have been able to have brought it on board at all.

Mr Oxley and I then returned to the ship, and after taking some refreshment, landed on the main, to proceed with the examination of the river: the part of it where we found the boat extending over a large flat, being in many places above a mile broad, interspersed with numerous low mangrove islands, and very shallow, except in the channel, where we found from nine to two fathoms water.

The country on either side was very hilly, and richly wooded, and the view altogether beautiful beyond description.

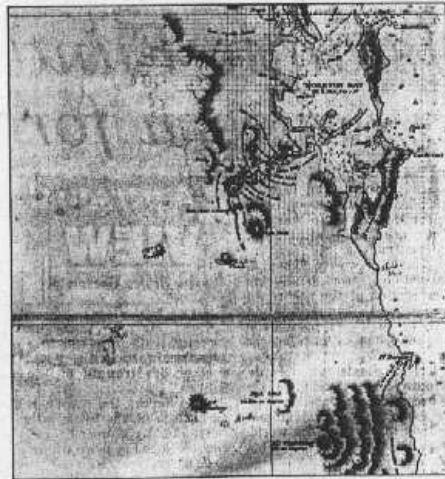

Having wandered out of the channel, we with some difficulty proceeded about four miles, when the river assumed a different appearance, being contracted to a quarter of a mile in width, with five fathoms water all across; the banks also wore a different aspect, being free of mangroves; the soil seemed rich, and the timber evidently improved in size and quality.

The scenery here exceeded any thing I had seen in Australia - extending for miles along a deep rich valley, clothed with magnificent trees, the beauty of which was only interrupted by the turns and windings of the river, which here and there appeared like small lakes, while in the background, Mount Warning (the highest land in New South Wales) reared its barren and singularly shaped peak, forming a striking contrast with the richness of the intermediate country.

On the right bank of the river were standing, one man and several women and children, all perfectly naked. They did not appear so timid as the Indians usually are, but remained quietly while we landed to search for fresh water, the river being still brackish.

The man was curiously scarified all over the body, the flesh being raised as thick as my finger all over his breasts. He talked very loudly for some time, using much gesticulation, and frequently pointing to the other side of the river, where we had observed a number of native huts.

FLINDERS' map of the Gold Coast and Tweed region with alterations made by Oxley marking the Tweed River and the waterway separating the mainland from what is now South Stradbroke Island.

We could not however, obtain from him any information with regard to the object of our search; so after giving him some biscuit which he tasted and instantly spat out again, we left him, and as it was now late, proceeded towards the vessel, resolving the next day to return and follow the river as far as circumstances would allow.

We saw no weapons of any description among these people, with the exception of a stone hatchet hanging at the back of one of the women, which was of wretchedly crude formation. It was now agreed that the mate and the crew should remain with the boat in the river, where we had joined them, all night, and that Mr Oxley and I should return on board to sleep, and come back with Mr Stirling at daylight.

However, just as we were preparing to land, the wind suddenly shifted to the S.W.; and as it seemed likely to continue steady in that point, Mr Oxley thought it imprudent to lose the advantage of it, and therefore deferred exploring the river till our return.

The signal was accordingly made for the boat to return on board, and all hands were employed in getting the vessel under way.

In the meantime a number of natives, amounting to about 200, collected on the shore opposite the vessel, and we could perceive with the glass that they all had spears. They continued quietly watching us till they saw the square sail hoisted and the vessel under way; when they sent up a loud shout, and continued dancing and shouting while we were within hearing.

The little island under which we lay received the name Turtle Island, in gratitude for the abundant supply of that fish which we procured from it.

We also gave the name of the "Tweed" to the river. The latitude of our anchorage is 29° 8' S. and its longitude 153° 31' 30" E."

The night we left Turtle Island we experienced a very severe gale, but as it was in our favour, it did not annoy us; and when it ceased the next day it fell quite calm and the sea appeared perfectly alive with fish. The bonitos, skip-jacks, and other fish, were leaping in every direction as far as the eye could reach, while immediately round the vessel were several large sharks, but we were not fortunate enough to catch any.

(The next few weeks were spent examining Port Curtis and the "Pumice-stone river" before finally discovering the Brisbane River and establishing that the waters of Moreton Bay extended to the broadwater and "the land of Point Lookout" was an island. The planned exploration of the Tweed did not eventuate, however; during the return voyage to Sydney, Uniacke and Stirling persuaded Oxley to anchor off Turtle Island in an attempt to capture some more turtles. Uniacke's narrative continues.)

The next morning, about eight o'clock, we were within a few miles of Turtle Island; and Mr Sterling and I, who had, ever since we left it, been anticipating the pleasure we should feel in bringing back a quantity of turtles to our friends in Sydney, with much difficulty, persuaded Mr Oxley to come to the cutter under the lee of the island.

We then went ashore; but owing to the late gate, the breakers ran so very high, and the tide was so far in, that though we saw numbers of turtle swimming round the island, not one of them was able to land.

However we procured a large number of mutton-bird eggs, together with several birds, and a large bag of spinach, with which we went back to the cutter, and immediately got under way.

The eggs were excellent, and are with difficulty distinguished from hens'. Indeed, one of our men assured me that he had often sold them in Sydney market for hens' eggs.

They afforded us an excellent dish of parsnips, which, with the spinach, were a real treat to us, as we had been long without any vegetables; and Mr Oxley, Mr Penson and some of the men, had become badly afflicted with scurvy.

John Oxley

The follow limited story of John Oxley comes from the Australian Dictionary of Biography online version and the article was written by E. W. Dunlop (NM 2006)

OXLEY, JOHN JOSEPH WILLIAM MOLESWORTH (1785?-1828), surveyor-general and explorer, was born at Kirkham Abbey near Westow, Yorkshire, England, the eldest son of John Oxley and his wife Isabella, who was related to the Irish Viscount Molesworth. He joined the navy in 1799 as a midshipman in the Venerable, and transferred in November 1801 to the Buffalo, in which as master's mate he sailed to Australia. Arriving there in October 1802 he engaged in coastal survey work including an expedition to Western Port in 1804-05. In 1805 Governor King appointed him acting lieutenant in charge of the Buffalo, and in 1806 he commanded the Estramina on a trip to Van Diemen's Land. Next year he returned to England where on 25 November he was commissioned lieutenant. He came back to Sydney in November 1808 to take up an appointment as first lieutenant in H.M.S. Porpoise, having sailed out as agent for the Transport Board in the convict ship Speke, in which he shipped goods worth £800 as an investment. He had obtained an order from the Colonial Office for a grant of 600 acres (243 ha) near the Nepean River, but Lieutenant-Governor Paterson granted him 1000 acres (405 ha). Oxley had to surrender these in 1810, but Governor Macquarie granted him 600 acres (243 ha) near Camden which he increased in 1815 to 1000 acres (405 ha) again. This he called Kirkham.

When Paterson allowed the deposed Governor Bligh to leave Sydney in the Porpoise in March 1809 Oxley was aboard and sailed with Bligh to the Derwent. Next year he wrote a lengthy report on the settlements in Van Diemen's Land before sailing for England in the Porpoise in May. In London he applied for the post of Naval Officer in Sydney, and then, after paying C. Grimes to resign, according to John Macarthur, he twice sought that of surveyor-general. Oxley denied that he had been a partisan of Macarthur when Bligh was deposed, but his letters show that he was on very intimate terms with the rebel leader. In 1812 he became engaged to Elizabeth Macarthur; this was broken off when her father discovered the extent of Oxley's debts. By that time, through the influence of Macarthur's friend Walter Davidson, Oxley's second application for the surveyor-generalship had been successful. In 1811 he had retired from the navy, and in May 1812 sailed for Sydney in the Minstrel to take up his new duties.

During Governor Macquarie's administration Oxley was as much occupied with exploring as surveying. In 1815 his assistant, George Evans, discovered the Lachlan River and reported good country south-west of Bathurst. In March 1817 Macquarie appointed Oxley to lead an expedition to explore this region and if possible 'to ascertain the real course ... of the Lachlan ... and whether it falls into the sea, or into some inland lake'. Leaving Bathurst on 28 April the explorers followed the Lachlan for more than two months until in July impassable marshes prevented further progress. Oxley then struck northward to the Macquarie River, which he traced back to Bathurst, where he arrived on 29 August. Macquarie highly praised Oxley's 'Zealous, Indefatigable and Intelligent Exertions' and recommended that he be given £200 for his 'Meritorious Services', which the secretary of state approved.

On 28 May 1818 Oxley led another expedition from Bathurst and followed the Macquarie River until it too disappeared into 'an ocean of reeds' (Macquarie marshes). From 6 July Oxley's party proceeded north-east until they discovered the Castlereagh River, then turning east they found the rich Liverpool Plains, reached and named the Peel River, crossed the southern part of the New England Range near Walcha, found the Hastings River and followed it to its estuary which was named Port Macquarie. A hazardous journey down the coast ended at Newcastle in November, some six months after the party's departure from Bathurst. The rich pastoral lands of the Liverpool Plains were quickly taken up by pastoralists, but Oxley failed in his primary object of tracing the Macquarie and Lachlan Rivers and formulated the mistaken theory of an inland sea. 'I feel confident', he wrote, 'we were in the immediate vicinity of an inland sea, most probably a shoal one ... being filled up by immense depositions from the waters flowing into it from the higher lands'. Nevertheless his reports aroused great interest, and not only did his Journals of Two Expeditions Into the Interior of New South Wales (London, 1820) give the first detailed description of the Australian inland, despite his grave doubts of the value of the lands he had traversed, but his discoveries paved the way for the later work of Charles Sturt and T. L. Mitchell.

Oxley's naval experience fitted him better for coastal survey work than for inland exploration. In September-December 1819 he made a trip by sea to Jervis Bay, where he thought the country did not offer 'the smallest inducement for the foundation of a Settlement on its shores, being ... for the most part Barren and generally deficient in Water'. Earlier that year in the Lady Nelson, assisted by Phillip Parker King in the Mermaid, he had charted Port Macquarie, on which he reported favourably. In December 1820 he made a second survey of the district and reported in favour of establishing a new penal settlement there. In October 1823 he sailed north as far as Port Curtis, and on his return explored Moreton Bay and the Brisbane River, up which he sailed about fifty miles (80 km). His favourable report was again quickly followed by the formation of a penal settlement.

In 1820 Oxley had made several suggestions to Commissioner Bigge about the sale of land in New South Wales. Bigge accepted these and, when Governor Brisbane received his report, Oxley drafted in July 1824 specific regulations for sales at 5s an acre, to be paid over three years; in 1825 and again in 1826 he drew up further regulations on land grants in accordance with the fluctuating orders of the Colonial Office. In 1825 he was appointed one of the three commissioners to carry out the thorough survey of the colony and its division into counties, shires and parishes which had been ordered from London; but this work was not easily accomplished. The duties of the survey office became very extensive as settlement expanded and Oxley was always handicapped by the lack of a sufficiently numerous trained staff. Governor Darling thought him 'very clever' but a man who would 'never submit to the Drudgery of carrying on the details of his Department'. He constantly sought increases in fees, salary and staff, but though both Macquarie and Brisbane supported his requests, the secretary of state was reluctant to incur the extra expenditure. In 1823 his salary was increased from 15s. to £1 a day; his fees had been increased in 1818 and between 1823 and 1828 brought him an average of nearly £1500 a year.

Oxley also had business interests. After he arrived in New South Wales in 1812 he acted as agent for Maude & Robinson of the Cape and Thomas & William Ward of London. He acted for the creditors of Garnham Blaxcell and Robert Campbell and of the firm of Lord, Kable & Underwood. He kept in touch with Walter Davidson at Canton, and acted for J. H. Bent with Alexander & Co. of Calcutta. In addition to these mercantile activities he was developing his properties and entered into partnership with Commissary Allan in raising cattle for the stores. Near his property, Kirkham, he received further grants of 820 acres (332 ha) at Minto in 1816 and 630 acres (255 ha) at Appin in 1817. After 1816 he sent cattle into the Bowral district and in June 1823 was granted 2300 acres (931 ha) there registered as Weston (probably a mistake for Westow). As a sheep breeder he took prizes at the shows of the Agricultural Society which he helped to found in 1822, though in 1824 John Macarthur criticized his 4000 crossbred sheep which, he said, Oxley sold as pure merinos to strangers; but Oxley and

XXX

Macarthur were then on very bad terms. For a time Oxley was a director of the Bank of New South Wales, but in 1826 he was one of the founders and first directors of its 'exclusivist' rival, the Bank of Australia. He was a shareholder of the Australian Agricultural Co., which appears to have paid him for advice and assistance.

Oxley was keenly interested in the public and cultural life of the colony. He was one of the first officers of the Bible Society when it was founded in 1817. In September 1819 he was appointed to the committee of the Female Orphan Institution, the Male Orphan Institution and the Public School Institution. In 1821 he became a foundation member of the Philosophical Society, and that December Governor Brisbane made him a magistrate. He subscribed to both St James's Church and to Scots Church where he was one of the congregation which in 1824 petitioned for government assistance for its minister. He was selected as one of the five members of the original Legislative Council in 1824, but was not reappointed when the council was reconstituted next year. He had always been a strong exclusive. Macquarie criticized him as 'factious and dissatisfied'. In 1812 John Macarthur wrote warmly of Oxley's 'good nature'; later he spoke in a very different vein after 'his unprincipled conduct made it necessary to drop his acquaintance'. Whatever his character his financial incapacity is clear, and this made him, in Macarthur's opinion, 'no more fit to make his way in the midst of the sharks among whom it will be his fate to live than he is qualified to be a Lord Chancellor'. Despite his investments, his fees and his land grants, when he died at Kirkham on 26 May 1828, he was so 'much embarrassed in his pecuniary circumstances' that the Executive Council felt compelled to recommend special assistance to his widow and children. The British government refused to sanction a pension but agreed to permit a grant of 5000 acres (2024 ha) to Oxley's sons in recognition of their father's services.

On 31 October 1821 Oxley married Emma Norton (1798-1885) at St Philip's Church. They had two sons, John (b.1824) and Henry (b.1826), but earlier Oxley had had two daughters by Charlotte Thorpe and one by Elizabeth Marmon. He kept a substantial town house in Sydney, opposite St James's Church, and he built a fine country seat at Kirkham. He was aged only 42 when he died, but his constitution had 'been materially injured by the privations which he suffered during the Several Expeditions on which he was employed in exploring the Interior'. He was buried in the Devonshire Street cemetery in Sydney.

The following pages were not part of the original book but provide a detailed family history of the Molesworth connection through John Oxley. These lists detail the descendants of John Oxley and for the interested family historian are a valuable source of information. (Neville Maloney 2006)

Richard is a descendant of a Nicholas family from Wiltshire; my wife, Anne is an Oxley descendent via Lt. John J W M Oxley's sister, Isabella m Capt Francis Dixon. We believe that Emma Norton bought up the two Dixon girls after the deaths of their father in 1832 and mother in 1839 along with Emma's two sons and one or more of the daughter's of John Oxley by his convict servants, including Frances Oxley (Thorpe).

Notes for REV. JOHN TWELLS:

"In the 19 century, the Twells were a well-known and well-respected family involved in banking, law, politics and the church.

Philip Twells was the younger son of John Twells, a banker of Gracechurch Street in the City of London. John had married Mary Line of Alum Rock in Warwickshire and there seem to be many family connections with this area of the country. Later, John acquired a country residence, Darby House in Sunbury, Middlesex, which was inherited on his death by his elder son and Philip's elder brother, John.

John Twells junior followed an interesting dual career as priest and banker! He was born in London in 1805, the year of the Battle of Trafalgar, and was educated in Birmingham, which may seem odd given the number of good schools in London at that time, but John Twells senior's brother, Philip Twells, lived with his young family in Ashted, Birmingham and his sons were educated at King Edward's School in that city so it is reasonable to assume that their cousin John went there also.

Unusually for an eldest son in those days, John Twells junior went into the Church on graduating from Trinity College, Cambridge in 1827, being ordained Deacon in 1829 and priest in 1830. His career in the Church took him from a curacy in Nottinghamshire to parishes in the Retford area and finally to the positions of Rural Dean of Retford and Honorary Prebendary of Lincoln Cathedral.

The evidence for his expertise in banking comes from his role as author of a work on the Gold Standard published in 1848 and several pamphlets on Currencies. He also gave evidence to the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the Bank Charter Act of 1857.

Like his brother Philip, John Twells married late in life at the age of 64 in 1869 to Elizabeth Isabella Georgiana Grose, the widow of the Reverend Thomas Grose who had been the Rector of St. Peter's, Cornhill in the City of London. John Twells had no children of his own but seems to have adopted his wife's son from her first marriage. The boy entered Jesus College, Cambridge in 1876 under the name of Richard Lionel Twells and was ordained priest in Ely Cathedral in 1881, the start of a ministry, which took him to a parish in Antigua in the West Indies as well as many parishes in the Lincoln diocese.

John Twells died at his family home of Darby House in Sunbury on January 12th 1875."
